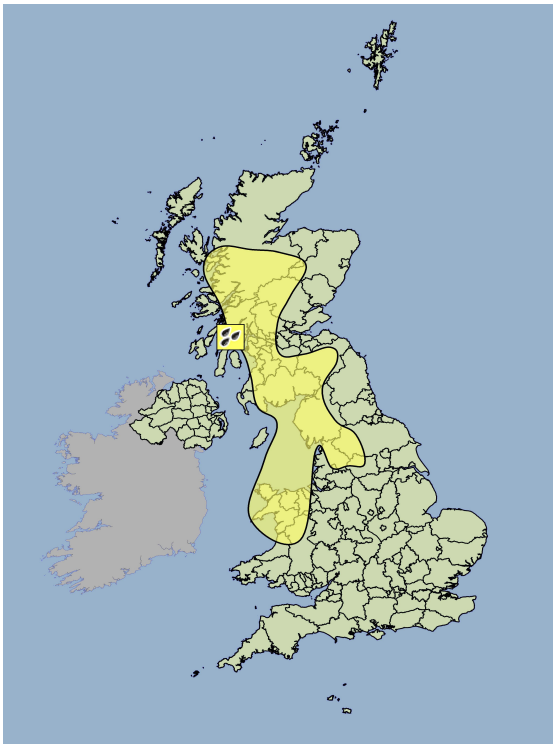
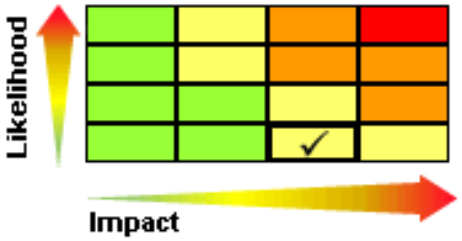
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Another area of low pressure is expected to move quickly east across the Atlantic, bringing another spell of heavy rain to western parts of the UK. Across western Scotland, north of the Central Belt, around 40-60 mm of rain is expected to fall quite widely, with up to 100 mm possible over high ground. Across the rest of Scotland, northwest England and north Wales, rainfall amounts are likely to be lower, with 20-40 mm falling widely and up to 60 mm possible over high ground.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 15:00 on Thu, 28th Jan 2016 until 12:00 on Fri, 29th Jan 2016

Rain is expected to spread from the west during Thursday, gradually turning heavier and more persistent. The heaviest rainfall will be over high ground, initially across western Scotland, then developing across northwest England and Wales during Thursday afternoon and evening. Drier conditions, albeit with some showers, are expected to reach Scotland late Friday morning, with the rain expected to clear northwest England and north Wales by midday.

Be aware of the potential for further localised flooding and disruption to travel.

This is an update to extend the warning further south into north Wales, although lower impacts are likely here than further north across Scotland. The expiry time has also been brought forward.
